CRI Awarded CUES® Financial Suppliers Forum Supplier of the Year

ATLANTA – Creditor Resources, Inc. (CRI) was awarded the Credit Union Executive Society's (CUES) 2006 Financial Supplier Forum (FSF) Supplier of the Year during an awards ceremony at the CUES® Nexus Conference, on April 12 in Tucson, AZ.

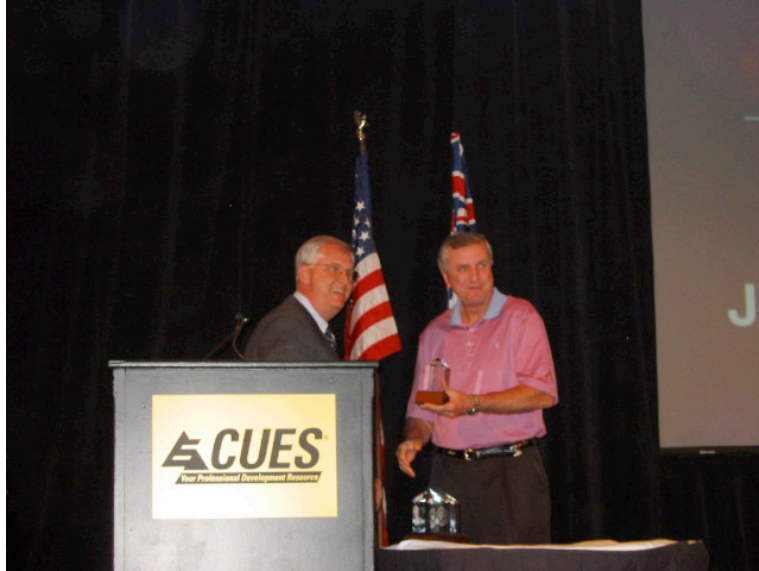

“Creditor Resources, Inc. is honored to be selected as a 2006 CUES FSF Supplier of the Year,” said CRI’s Senior Vice President and Business Unit Leader John Kramer. “We pledge our continued support for the credit union movement throughout the United States and Canada, and thank CUES and our partners for their support.”

Awards were presented in three categories based on the number of employees in the credit union division of nominated firms. The CUES Board of Directors judged the award following entry evaluation by the FSF Advisory Committee. Advisory Committee members abstained from evaluating their own firms as well as competing or partnering firms.

Supplier of the Year entries were judged based on an organization’s contributions to the credit union industry, including the benefits of a firm’s products and services, contributions to CUES and its Councils, contributions to other credit union organizations, recommendations from client credit unions, contributions to national and local civic and community organizations and other achievements.

CRI, a member of the CUES FSF for 10 years, was the winner in the 100+ employees category. For more than 35 years, Creditor Resources, Inc. (CRI), has offered service and support exclusively to the movement, allowing it to specialize in products and tools that specifically meet the needs of credit unions, in areas that include marketing, training and lending technology. More than 750 credit unions in North America have benefited from CRI’s innovative services.
